THE

South-Carolina GAZETTE.

From THURSDAY March 13th, to THURSDAY March 20th, 1755.

PARIS, November 5.

LAST week some custom-house officers went to a house which the earl of Albemarle has hired, opposite his own, for the reception of the English couriers, under a pretence of searching for contraband goods. His excellency's servants assured them that they were mistaken, and advised them to take care what they did; which admonition only encouraged them to persist in their search, and they accordingly ransack'd all the rooms, opened the boxes belonging to the couriers, and left no place unexamined, but found nothing that they were in search of. The court being informed of this proceeding, has ordered the parties concerned to be taken up, without waiting for a complaint from the earl of Albemarle; and the King has caused it to be assured to that minister, that he will take care to procure him all the satisfaction he can desire.

LONDON,

Dec. 5. We hear that Mr. Alt, Envoy-Extraordinary from the landgrave of Hesse, having had an audience of his majesty, delivered a letter from the landgrave upon affairs of importance, towards cultivating the good harmony which at present subsists between the two courts.

Dec 7. It is reported that the famous poet Mr. Francis de Voltaire, (justly esteemed the Pope of France) will soon retire from the Beau Monde, to pass the remainder of his days in a convent.—This gentleman is thought by many of his countrymen to be too great a lover of the English. He sojourned more than two years among us, and studied hard in Greenwich-Park to attain our language. He has distinguished himself by many pieces of fine poetry, but especially by that incomparable epic poem the Henriade, where his love of liberty is fully displayed by the good character he exhibits of queen Elizabeth and the English nation; as is also his hatred of persecution on account of religion, and his abhorrence of the Parisian massacre; and the horrid murder of Admiral Coligni, and one hundred thousand protestants, on St. Bartholomew's-day 1574. Voltaire makes no scruple to let the world know that Charles [illegible], was so great a bigot or rather monster, as to murder several of his subjects with his own hand.

We learn from Cologne, that a report is revived there of the elector's being inclined to admit of a coadjutor, and tho' the most profound secrecy is observed on this subject, yet people take the liberty of guessing that it will be a certain young prince formerly mentioned.

Extract of a private Letter from Madria, Oct. 29.

"Those who imagine that the fall of the marquis de la Ensenada will occasion any material change in the system of this court, are likely to see themselves mistaken. One of that minister's faults, was the ambition of engrossing all the business of the monarchy into his own hands: He had too many departments, to manage them all well, had he even been a strict y honest man. Another fault, which is a consequence of having too much power, was the carrying on the commerce of America by register ships (instead of sending out the galleons and flota, as was the custom formerly, and will be so again) which brought him in large perquisites for granting the licences. In short, his chief view, for aught that hitherto appears to the contuary, was to amass riches; in doing which, as he was but of a low extraction, he only verified a certain old proverb. It was therefore necessary to remove him. But such misdemeanors have nothing to do with the general affairs of Europe, or the political system of Spain in particular. Our court is always inclined to keep peace and friendship with England, upon honourable and profitable terms. And as for the affairs of Italy, there is no likelihood that the interest of the queen dowager's sons will be neglected; because such neglect would turn to the account of the house of Austria; and as it is uncertain how soon the king of the two Sicilies may be called to the throne of the Spanish monarchy, it behoves our ministers and grandees not to slight his concerns."

Paris, Nov. 25. Our court having demanded of that of London to know the motives of the considerable armaments which are making in Great-Britain, received an answer, which, it is said, was by no means agreeable to the king or his minister

LONDON. Dec. 12.

By a private letter from Toulon we have advice, that not long since there were in that port, one ship of eighty guns, five of twenty-four, seven of sixty-four, one of fifty-six, and three of fifty, besides four frigates, three bomb ketches, four xebecks, and fourteen galleys, which are all ready to put to sea. There were likewise on the stocks, one ship of eighty guns, one of seventy-four, one of sixty-four, and three frigates. It is remarked in the same letter, that the largest of these ships have but two decks, which render them better able to bear their lower decks than any three deck ships.

Dec. 14. It is reported that some favourable dispatches have been lately received from the court of Berlin, by the way of Vienna, concerning the affair of the Silesia loan.

About a week ago the wife of Solomon Lyon, a Jew, applied to one of the magistrates of this city for a warrant to take up her husband, on pretence that her life was in danger, and last Monday evening he was apprehended and sent to the poultry-compter, and on Tuesday he was carried before Sir Charles Asgill at Guildhall, where the wife appeared, and the chief article that she had to allege against her husband, was, that "she had been married upwards of fourteen months, and still remained "a pure virgin;" but the alderman informed her, that he had nothing to do with matrimony affairs, and discharged the prisoner.

Dec. 17. Our accounts from Copenhagen acquaint us, that his Danish majesty has lately issued a kind of commission for charitable uses, directing that within a certain time the managers of all charitable foundations shall give in a true account of their funds and revenues to a committee of his privy council; as also of the poor maintained by them, that they may from time to time be visited, to prevent any embezzlements from, or any ill usage given to the unhappy.

It is reported about St. James's, that his Majesty will not visit his German dominions next summer notwithstanding what was inserted in the papers some time ago to the contrary.

Our correspondent at Paris acquaints us, that the new comptroller-general has a project, as soon as the royal lotteries are all drawn, of a very extensive kind, and as the prizes are to consist of annuities, assigned upon a new capital, it is supposed it will bring immense sums into the kingdom, and bring the fortunate persons, or at least the far greater part of them, to reside there. A scheme in which his predecessor was not altogether unsuccessful.

We are assured that a gentleman of the horse belonging to the king of Prussia is now here, and has been with most of the eminent dealers in Northamptonshire, &c. to pick up a string of horses to send over to Holland for his master's use; by which we are convinced that our fine breed is in great esteem in most parts of Europe, as well as France.

Dec. 19. It is said in some private letters from Italy, that overtures have been made about a second match for the duke of Penthieve, and they are of opinion that the princess Mathilda of Modena, born the 7th of February 1729, is designed for him.

We hear from Kent, that a warm dispute between two noble persons, relating to a considerable estate in the Isle of Thanet, is to be decided in his majesty's court of king's bench. The law being deem'd a safer instrument for that decision than sword or pistol.

Extract of a Letter from Nova Scotia to a Gentleman in New-England, dated Sept. 29.

"I long ago acquainted you that this province was in the utmost danger, upon the first rupture between the two crowns, of falling into the hands of the French, who had (according to their usual manner of gaining more upon their neighbours in time of peace than of war) contrary to the most solemn treaties, seized upon Bay Vert, and built a fort there, to maintain a communication by sea with Louisbourg and Canada; that they had built another fort within sight of ours to command the Isthmus of the Peninsula, and a communication with the Bay of Fundy and St. John's river; and that they had taken possession of St. John's river, and built a fort near the mouth of it, and another higher up this river; and were masters of all the fur trade of that river, which before the late peace was carried on wholly by the English: From all which, together with the known disposition of the French inhabitants, you will easily believe that upon the first appearance of any considerable force from France, this province must unavoidably fall into their hands, there being no place that is capable of holding out, even for one day, but Annapolis Royal; and if this should be the case, which it probably will very soon, you know, better than I can tell you, the fatal consequence to all the rest of the British colonies in North-America, not to mention, to Great-Britain herself: Yet the French are still suffered to remain unmolested in these unjustifiable encroachments. Encouraged by that, they have lately (and no wonder at it) behaved in the following insolent manner: Capt. Rouse went with Capt. Kinsey to St. John's river; the wind was contrary, and prevented their entering it, but they sent their boats near to the fort, the French fired upon them from the fort and from the vessels near it, which they returned, and staid till they took a sketch of it. Capt. Rouse threatens that he will return in the spring and knock it down, I suppose he means, he hopes by that time to have sufficient orders to justify him in such an action; for I believe from his own character, if he had orders that would have bore him out in doing it now, he would hardly have patience to stay till the spring. At the same time that the French are behaving in this insolent perfidious manner, the battery at Annapolis-Royal, the only place capable of making any defence, is dismounted, and the guns carried to Halifax, as if we were determined to make the whole an easier prey to the French. Tremble then not only for our fate, but your own likewise in turn."

Dec. 24. There have been 22,696 persons buried within the bills of mortality this year, which are 3,420 more than the last year; among them one person 109 years of age, three others upwards of an hundred each, and eighty-five aged between ninety and an hundred.

We learn from Petersburgh, that a very eminent mathematician has lately made many curious observations, all of which tend to prove the certainty of Mr. Mairan's hypothesis, that the aurora borealis is not to be accounted for from the notion of refractions, but is in reality occasioned by the mixture of some part of the sun's atmosphere with us.

Some private letters from Italy insinuate, that most of the little courts in that country cannot help expressing a degree of envy at the late advantages gain'd by that of Naples in point of commerce, which are very considerable, and from the attention shewn by the administration to encourage industry, to open new harbours, and to improve the old is like to increase and extend every day.

Some politicians in Germany discern, or think they discern, some singular appearance in Poland, from whence they pretend to predict, that whenever the throne becomes vacant, a new candidate will appear, but with old credentials, an abjuration in one hand, a purse in the other, and a numerous body of troops behind.

Dec. 26. We hear from Chatham, that his majesty's ship Dunkirk and Litchfield are fitted out for Channel service, but not yet commissioned.

They tell us from Genoa, that the last dispatches received by the government from the Marquis Doria, their commissary general in the Island of Corsica, give the most pleasing hopes that the malecontents will at length submit to the Genoese government.

A certain professor at Leyden is busy on a botanical work of great labour and very extensive utility. He proposes to treat the virtues of vegetables from experiments, to shew that they are the most efficacious branch of the materia medica; to do justice to the ancients in respect to the excellency of their compositions; and to render it evident, that the moderns have been too hasty in rejecting facts, because established or supported by false reasoning. He is a person of much modesty and profound learning.

Dec. 28. The art of the vegetable production in in this climate to come to that perfection, that last Sunday as fine large cucumbers were served at Court as in the natural season.

Hanover, Dec. 20. We have letters from Hesse-Cassel, which bring an account, that the states were extraordinarily assembled, upon the important affair of settling the protestant succession and religion in the landgraviate, after the decease of the present landgrave, notwithstanding the hereditary prince has embraced the Romish faith, and that their decree shall be irrevocable.

Paris, Dec. 21. Our religious disputes rise higher and higher; the archbishop is inflexible, and the king continues to support the authority of his parliament. The duke de Duras is fully employed in a negociation with the court of Madrid, where he is labouring to conclude a general treaty of commerce, into which the allies of France, particularly Sweden, Denmark, and Prussia, are to be admitted.

Francfort, Dec. 22. The states of the landgraviate of Hesse-Cassel, which were opened on the 17th, proceeded with great unanimity. This is far from being the case at Ratisbon, where the members of the dyet scarce agree about any thing: It is however thought, that the princes and states of the Protestant religion will make extraordinary efforts to obtain satisfaction for several grievances to which those of their communion have been lately subjected.

London, Jan. 4. William Lyttelton, Esq; brother to the hon. Sir George Lyttelton, Bart. and member of parliament for Bewdley in Worcestershire, is appointed governor of South-Carolina, in the room of James Glen, Esq.

'Tis reported that Lord Cadogan will succeed the late earl of Albemarle, as colonel of the Coldstream regiment of foot guards; that the present earl of Albemarle (late Lord Bury) will succeed lord Cadogan, as colonel and captain of the second troop of grenadier guards: Col. Drury (lieutenant colonel of the first regiment of foot guards) succeed to the regiment of foot, now commanded by the earl of Albemarle, and that lord Delaware will be governor and captain-general of Virginia, in the room of the late lord Albemarle.

We are credibly informed, that his majesty has so great regard to the faithful services of the late earl of Albemarle, that he has settled a pension of 1200 l. per ann. upon the countess Dowager.

Our last accounts from Vienna assure us, that the ministers have brought the finances into so exact a method, that they shall be in no want of funds in case of a war. There is a negotiation on the carpet for taking eight or ten thousand Swiss into her Imperial majesty's pay, if it should be at all necessary. What will, in a great measure depend on the election of a king of the Romans, which will certainly take place in the summer.

We hear that in a short time the banners, arms, &c. of a certain German prince, who has lately embraced the Romish faith, will be removed from St. George's to Windsor.

In answer to those who argue so strenuously against the East India company's exporting yearly such vast quantities of gold and silver, the company's advocates may say, that they do no more than what is done by other merchants, who export large sums to carry on their trade with the nations in the Baltick, where the balance being against them, they must consequently make it up with gold or silver.

But to this one may reply, that most of the goods imported from Russia, Sweden, Denmark, and other countries in the Baltick, are absolutely necessary to us as a maritime trading nation; we can't do without masts, plank, pitch, tar, and hemp, and must therefore trade where such things are to be had best or cheapest, without regarding whether the balance of trade is in our favour or against us. But it cannot be said that tea and china ware are necessary to keep up the figure we have hitherto made at sea: all the money exported to purchase such luxuries and such baubles is absolutely lost to the nation, as we want them not at home, and can find no market for them abroad; at least the company can't deny that china ware is quite useless, whatever may be said in favour of tea.

Yesterday died the right hon. William Stanhope, earl of Harrington, viscount Petersham, and baron of Harrington, general of foot, governor of the charter house, fellow of the royal society, and one of his majesty's most hon. privy council.

Thursday died, at his house in Queen square, Ormond street, Sir James Lowther, Bart. knight of the shire, and vice admiral of the county of Cumberland. He succeeded his brother in title in October 1731, was sole proprietor of the coal mines at Whitehaven, and supposed to be the richest commoner in England. He died a batchelor.

Yesterday his majesty was pleased to confer the honour of knighthood on Matthew Lambe, Esq; member of parliament for the city of Peterborough, and one of his majesty's council.

We hear that the following noblemen are to have the vacant garters, viz. the earl of Carlisle, earl of Holderness, and earl of Waldegrave.

By Capt. Cook, who is just arrived in 6 Weeks and 4 Days from Bristol, we have the following fresh Advices; and an Account of an hot Press in England.

LONDON, January 11.

ADVICES from Francfort suggest, that the unfortunate turn things have taken in Hesse Cassel will afford his Prussian majesty a fresh opportunity of making himself considered in the empire, and the zeal with which he has declared himself in favour of the Protestant interest sufficiently shews his resolution to improve it.

On Thursday WILLIAM LYTTELTON, Esq; member of parliament for Bewdley in Worcestershire, kissed his majesty's hand at St. James's, on being appointed governor of SOUTH-CAROLINA.

It is not easy to conceive what views France may have in so prodigiously augmenting her marine, she having, it's assured, at present 97 ships of the line and 50 frigates, besides galliots and other ships, and every day new ones are launching in the several docks of the kingdom; and besides we are informed, that for some months past, a vast quantity of wood proper for building ships has been brought to the ports of that kingdom from Sweden and Denmark, and that there are English shipwrights at almost all the dock yards.

London, Jan. 14. 'Tis said that accounts came by yesterday's mail, that the French are equipping at Brest, with the utmost expedition, two squadrons of men of war; but for what destination is not yet known.

London, Jan. 18. It is said in the Hague gazette, that the treaty depending between the courts of Great-Britain and Spain, is on the point of being concluded; and by one of the principal articles of this treaty the English are to be reinstated in all the possessions they formerly had in the Gulph of Honduras; and that their commerce in the gulph, as also in the Bay of Campeachy, will be regulated so as to prevent any disputes hereafter between the two nations.

Letters from Paris advise, that orders have been sent to Brest, and some other ports of France, to fit out with the greatest diligence, fifteen ships of the line and five frigates, which, it's said, will be sent to America with 6000 land forces on board.

Yesterday 12,000 l. was shipped on board a vessel for Virginia, for the payment of the forces that have and are to be shipped from Cork, for a farther protection of the English against the French in those parts.

The Terrible, Monarch, and Captain, men of war, are ordered to be got ready with the utmost dispatch; and 'tis expected many others will soon be put into commission.

London, Jan. 21. We hear that a party of the train of artillery will be sent to America.

It is talked of about St. James's as a thing certain, that his majesty will visit his German dominions upon the rising of the parliament, which it is thought will be the latter end of April, and that he will have an interview with her royal highness the princess of Hesse.

London, Jan. 23. It is currently reported that a war will soon be declared between this nation and a certain power.

It is rumoured that the last mail brought advice that the French had taken Madras.

By a private letter from Dunkirk we learn, that for some weeks past the French have been firing off troops from Flanders toward Britanny.

We hear that Capt. Saunders, of the navy, will shortly be commanded on a secret expedition.

The 13th sailed from Cork, two men of war, and sixteen transport-ships for Virginia.

We hear that a squadron of ships will be soon fitted out to cruize in the Channel; and that Savage Moslyn, Esq; late commander of his majesty's ship the Hampton-Court, will be made an admiral, and command the squadron.

Monday it was reported, that the French were marching 10 000 men to make a descent on our coasts; and that a foreign M——— had been refused private audience; but this we look on to be mere invention to affect the Stocks.

Mr. Timothy,

AS a Member of the Community, I have beheld two Evils for some Time, with great Concern: But as I know not how to bring about their being remedied, I beg you'll give my Observations a Place in your next Gazette, which I make no Doubt may have a good Effect.

The FIRST is, That there is no Provision made by Law, to prevent the introducing Contagious Distempers into this Province, by Travellers coming from North Carolina or Georgia. Let me tell you, Mr. Timothy, that the Small-Pox has been some Time in Georgia, and now is there; and ask, if a Person comes from thence, with the Infection in his Cloaths, thro' our Country, what will avail all our Precautions by Sea?——In many Parts of Germany, it is a Custom to travel with Certificates of Health.

The SECOND is, The discharging of Ballast into our River, (contrary to Law) and that very frequent of late, which may in Time affect our Navigation more than we seem to imagine. How it may affect our Navigation is evident, by the Bank form'd off the Head of one of our Wharfs where a Piece of a Wreck was driven in the Hurricane: And yet we daily see Vessels move towards Shute's Folly (some don't give themselves the Trouble of going so far) who, when their Ballast Ports face that Way, empty into the Channel, and even just off the Wharfs.—A Harbour-Master perhaps might stop this Complaint, and do many other Things necessary for the preserving our Navigation and the Advantage of Shipping.—And I think a Use might be found for Ballast, on White Point.

I am, Sir, Yours, &c.

PUBLICOLA.
